Food

CREMA CATALANA

Crema Catalana, a beloved Spanish dessert, is a creamy custard with a caramelized sugar crust. Originating in Catalonia, this treat is often considered the Spanish counterpart to France's crème brûlée, though it has distinct characteristics. Made with milk instead of cream and flavored with cinnamon and citrus zest, Crema Catalana has a lighter, more aromatic profile. Traditionally served cold, it features a contrasting texture between the smooth custard and the crisp, torched sugar layer on top. This classic dessert is a must-try for anyone exploring the rich culinary heritage of Spain.

Escalivada

Escalivada is a traditional Catalan dish that celebrates the simplicity and flavors of roasted vegetables. The name comes from the Catalan word escalivar, meaning "to cook in ashes," reflecting its origins in rustic, fire-roasted preparation. Typically made with eggplant, red peppers, onions, and tomatoes, the vegetables are charred until tender, then peeled and sliced into strips. They are often drizzled with olive oil, seasoned with salt, and sometimes garnished with garlic or anchovies for extra flavor.

BOMBAS

Bombas are a beloved Spanish tapa originating from Barcelona, known for their flavorful combination of crispy and savory elements. These potato croquettes are shaped like small bombs, stuffed with a spicy meat filling, and deep-fried to golden perfection. They are traditionally served with two contrasting sauces: a rich, garlicky aioli and a bold, spicy brava sauce, symbolizing a culinary "explosion" of flavors. Popular in Catalan bars and restaurants, bombas are a must-try for anyone seeking a taste of Barcelona's vibrant tapas culture.

MUST TRY FOODS IN MADRID

GAMBAS AL AJILLO

Gambas al ajillo, or garlic shrimp, is a quintessential Spanish tapa that celebrates the delicious combination of fresh seafood and bold garlic. This dish features shrimp cooked in olive oil with generous amounts of garlic, chili peppers, and occasionally a dash of sherry. The result? Tender shrimp enveloped in aromatic olive oil, with the sharp kick of garlic and chile, creating a vibrant, flavorful experience that leaves a memorable taste of Madrid's culinary charm.

Huevos Rotos

Huevos rotos, or "broken eggs," is a humble yet delicious dish from Madrid. It consists of fried potatoes topped with eggs cooked to perfection, with the yolks spilling over the crispy potatoes when broken. Often complemented with slices of jamón or chorizo, this dish adds a savory depth to the comforting flavors, making it a beloved staple in Madrid's culinary scene.

BOCADILLO DE CALAMARES

Bocadillo de calamares, or calamari sandwich, is an essential Madrid dish to experience. This straightforward yet tasty sandwich showcases crispy fried calamari rings served in a fresh baguette. A squeeze of lemon or a touch of aioli enhances the flavors, but the highlight is the perfectly fried calamari. For the complete experience, pair it with a refreshing cold beer.
